Giurgiului cemetery. On October 22, 2008, 131 tombstones were seriously damaged or destroyed in the largest Jewish cemetery in Bucharest. The Commission has raised funds to restore the site to make a strong statement that hate crimes perpetrated by anti-Semites will not stop the preservation of what remains of Jewish cultural heritage in Romania. Romanian government leaders have condemned the attack and were expected to attend a ceremony rededicating the cemetery once the tombstones are restored. This public display of the rejection of extremist actions would make an important public statement.
