

PUBLIC
DIPLOMACY
EXCHANGE 2014
SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY

Syracuse University
Association of Public Diplomacy
Scholars

Exchange Journal of Public Diplomacy
Volume 5: Fall 2014

Public Diplomacy in Emerging Nations

Editorial Board

Co-Chief Editor: Adam Cyr
Co-Chief Editor: Russell Walker
Articles Editor: George Cymon
Cover Designed by: Julia Watson

Funding Provided by the Syracuse University Graduate Student Organization

Copyright in all contributions remains with the contributors. The publishers acquire all publication rights.

Copyright © 2014 by Exchange: The Journal of Public Diplomacy and contributors, published in partnership with the Association of Public Diplomacy Scholars at Syracuse University.

All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced or transmitted in any form or by any means, or stored in any retrieval system of any nature without prior written permission except for permitted fair dealing. Application for permission for other use of copyright material including permission to reproduce extracts in other published works shall be made to the publishers. Full acknowledgment of author, publisher and source must be given.

Please visit www.exchangediplomacy.com for more information regarding the journal's submission policy and to obtain additional copies of articles or full issues.

Syracuse University is pleased to offer an exciting dual-degree program geared for students interested in public diplomacy. This option affords students the opportunity to complete an M.S. in Public Relations from Syracuse University's S.I. Newhouse School of Public Communications along with an M.A. in International Relations from the Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs within only two years of study. As part of their academic and professional preparation, students complete challenging internships & policy-oriented seminars in Washington, DC.

Globally minded students working toward a career in public or international relations will find that our dual-degree public diplomacy program offers a world of possibilities. The program trains professionals to carry out public communications for governments, nongovernmental organizations (NGOs) and the private sector.

Public diplomacy is a new field that has grown out of a need for professionals who can effectively communicate with diverse national and international audiences. Cross-cultural communication presents complex challenges. Our students learn to skillfully craft an organization's messages, convey its vision and explain its action.

Syracuse University is proud to be among the first institutions of higher learning to recognize the need to educate future leaders in the public, private, and nongovernmental sectors on the theory and practice of public diplomacy and communication.

For more information, visit <http://publicdiplomacy.syr.edu/>

Dear Reader,

We are proud to present the 2014 Exchange Journal of Public Diplomacy. The Exchange Journal is a graduate student-run print and online publication of the Association of Public Diplomacy Scholars at Syracuse University. It provides public diplomacy scholars and practitioners with a forum to share research and experience that expands the field's body of knowledge. This is the fifth volume of the Exchange Journal.

This year's theme, "Public Diplomacy in Emerging Nations" began as an attempt to observe public diplomacy from a non-American perspective. It has spiraled into this journal which is chocked full of different perspectives about public diplomacy and how it is practiced around the world.

It should be noted that we are using a very loose definition of emerging nations. Turkey, India, China, Russia, and Mexico are anything but emerging nations. They are full-fledged countries that are major players in the world. We think this makes the journal even more relevant. Comparative studies are an increasingly important part of political science; therefore it needs to become an important of public diplomacy so that we as a discipline can move forward.

We sincerely hope you enjoy this year's volume, and we look forward to inspiring thought and debate on the subject.

Sincerely,

The 2014 Exchange Journal Staff