“Cephalonian”?

• Developed and implemented by Cardiff University (UK) librarians.

• Wished to have student interaction yet have controlled pace and structure

• They used humor, music and color in their presentations (music for “relaxed alertness”)

What is it?

• Innovative induction method
  – Generally first exposure to college library/librarian

• Informative
  – Basic library resource information is presented

• Interactive
  – Students ask scripted and unscripted questions

• Lighthearted atmosphere
  – Scripted questions are phrased in a humorous way
Cephalonian @ ESF

- Used in introductory classes for biology and biotechnology students
- Previously have been doing “25 Tips in 50 Minutes” with these classes
- Like to have a unique presentation – these students often hear my lectures in several different classes
- Hand out cards with questions to students as they enter class
- Provide introductory info. then time for questions
Our Method

1. Developed a series of questions from the material we wished to present.
2. Put together a slide show of introductory information.
3. Categorized the queries, developed “catchy” questions and made index cards with graphics.
4. Developed color-coded slides to answer the questions.
5. Handed out questions to students
6. Put on the show! Ideally in one hour time slot.

Let’s be honest, I’m not going to remember much from hearing this today. Is the information you give us online somewhere?

The tabs on the Moon Library home page are confusing. Which search do I use to find books?

I think I hear coyotes outside of my dorm at night. How do I find articles about coyotes in New York?

I prefer to do my homework in silence. Is there anywhere quiet in the library for me to work?
Why use this method?

• Working with mostly uninterested freshman at 5pm
• Promotes a positive first impression of the library
• Makes learning more personable and enjoyable
• Humorous instruction motivates and energizes
• Fun and novel for the instructor!
