

Abstract

The purpose of this project is to analyze the current situation of corruption in the public sector in North Macedonia and suggest possible solutions to prevent this kind of corruption.

Solutions

- Upgrading of the legislative framework for the fight against corruption;
- Increase in the responsibility of the administrative servants and prevention of politicization of the public service;
- More transparent and merit-based employment in public institutions;
- Judicial reform;
- Restoring citizens' trust in the public sector.

Introduction

According to United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, for many years the corruption in the public sector in North Macedonia is considered to be a serious problem.

Corruption in North Macedonia is considered to be most present in customs, courts, police, the Ministry of Health and the Ministry of Transport and Communications, the Government, local authorities and the tax administration.

In many reports and researches, bribery is underline to be the biggest corruption problem.

Definition

Corruption is abuse of entrusted power for private gain (U4 Anti-corruption resource center, n.d.). It can take many forms, occurs in different situations and includes diverse actions.

Corruption can happen anywhere: in business, government, the courts, the media, and in civil society, as well as across all sectors from health and education to infrastructure and sports. Corruption can involve anyone: politicians, government officials, public servants, business people or members of the public. Corruption adapts to different contexts and changing circumstances. It can evolve in response to changes in rules, legislation and even technology (Transparency International, n.d.).
