THE GIACOMUZZI BEAD SAMPLE BOOK AND FOLDERS

Karlis Karklins

The sample book described herein displays the wound glass beads produced during the third quarter of the 19th century by an acclaimed Venetian firm, that of the Giacomuzzi brothers. The book vividly shows what sorts of beads were being marketed by a single firm at this time, and provides much useful information concerning bead sizing systems. Although not marked with the producers name, the folders that accompany the book are of like date and at least one is likely a product of the Giacomuzzis.

INTRODUCTION

Archaeologists, ethnologists, collectors, and others interested in beads often seek to identify the age and place of manufacture of the specimens in their collections. Although much work has been done over the years to facilitate this task, there is still much to be learned. This is especially true of the 19th and early 20th centuries, a time when many bead styles cease to be made, a number of earlier types are revived, and numerous new styles and manufacturing techniques make their debut. As tightly dated bead samples of an identified manufacturer are ideal sources of data for this period, it was of great interest to learn of the Giacomuzzi sample book and two accompanying folders (Fig. 1) which had been found at a garage sale in Scottsdale, Arizona, in the early 1980s by Charles and Gloria Arquette, and are now in the possession of The Bead Museum in Glendale, Arizona (Karklins 1984:5-7).

The Giacomuzzi collection is important for a number of reasons:

1. It is one of only a handful of recorded sample collections that are of 19th-century origin; only the Levin Catalogue (Karklins 1985c), Venetian Bead Book (Karklins 1985a), and Frost Collection (Johnson 1977; Liu 1983) are comparable.

2. The manufacturer and his place of business are identified; it is not known who produced the Venetian Bead Book, and Levin and the Frosts were bead dealers, not manufacturers.

3. The Giacomuzzi book can be relatively tightly dated; the book's label, coupled with historical documentation, reveals that it was almost certainly produced between 1852 and 1868.

4. The collection reveals how beads were sized by a major Venetian producer in the 19th century; this will be very useful to those attempting to determine size populations in archaeological collections, as discussed by Ross (1990).

The beads displayed in the Giacomuzzi collection are described on the following pages using an expanded version (Karklins 1985b) of the taxonomic system devised by Kenneth and Martha Kidd (1970). Varieties that do not appear in the Kidds' lists are marked by an asterisk (*); two asterisks () denote a previously unrecorded type. Complex bead shapes are identified using Beck (1928).

Color names are those provided in the Color Harmony Manual (Container Corporation of America 1958). Diaphaneity is described using the terms opaque (op.), translucent (tsl.), and transparent (tsp.). Opaque beads are impenetrable to light except on the thinnest edges. Specimens that are translucent transmit light but diffuse it so that an object (such as a pin in the perforation) viewed through them is indistinct. A pin in the perforation of a transparent bead is clearly visible.

When listing bead sizes, those which are numerical (e.g., Size 2) are those designated and used by the Giacomuzzis. Those denoted by letters (e.g., Size a) are relative sizes designated by the author. Size ranges for the various varieties are followed by the average values in parentheses.

THE GIACOMUZZIS' MAJOR ACHIEVEMENTS

The Giacomuzzi brothers—Giovanni and Giuseppe—came from a family of glassmakers that specialized in beads. During a visit to Venice by Francis I of Austria, their father, Angelo, produced a bead in the presence of the emperor which bore the inscription Viva Francesco I in a laurel wreath (Morazzoni 1953:67-68). In 1838, Angelo achieved international fame for his decorated beads. When exhibited in New York in 1854, they "delighted the many elegant bourgeois who, with a few dollars, could wear necklaces, bracelets, and diadems in the latest fashion, causing the envy of matronly ladies who were still wearing the old jewels of the Empire and Restoration" (Morazzoni 1953:59).

Giovanni Giacomuzzi was well-known for his achievements as well. Born in 1817, he was the inventor of gold mother-of-pearl which was proclaimed the "jewel and queen of all the other beads" and "shone with a very special light" (Morazzoni...
This material found a new application in beadwork and received much acclaim in the adornment of altars and churches where it replaced gold embroidery. One of the most memorable examples is the Treviso theater where 2,268 kg (5,000 lbs.) of gold mother-of-pearl beads were sewn onto 70 m² of velvet (Morazzoni 1953:58).

Giovanni subsequently devised a method to mold crushed imitation mother-of-pearl and apply it to fabric with mastic to create tapestries, decorative furnishings, and book covers. This material was shown at the Rome Exposition to great enthusiasm, as well as at the Murano Glass Exhibition of 1869, where it won a badge of honor which was considered superior to a gold medal and was only conferred upon outstanding artists (Morazzoni 1953:58).

Giovanni had also received a silver medal from the Royal Institute of Science, Letters, and Arts of Venice in 1868 for developing a “transparent yellow-gold bead” using an oxide of uranium as the coloring agent. Surpassing all previous attempts to create a yellow-colored bead, it gave the illusion of a “transmutation from glass to gold” (Morazzoni 1953:58, 74).

Giovanni’s other achievements include poliemblemata, a type of mosaic composed of glass “prisms” arranged in various patterns. Developed in 1852, this product was very well received and, sawn into sheets, served as a decorative surface for furniture (Morazzoni 1953:61). Giovanni also produced a ruby glass without the use of gold as the colorant, an imitation carnelian, and a brilliant mother-of-pearl in silver, ruby, green, and blue glass (Morazzoni 1953:58).

It is not known when the Giacomuzzi brothers went out of business, but it seems to have been before June 30, 1898. On this day, 17 Venetian glass-beadmakers united to form the Società Veneziana per la industria delle Conterie and the Giacomuzzis were not among them (Pasquato 1953:77).
THE GIACOMUZZI SAMPLE BOOK

The principal component of the Giacomuzzi collection is the sample book which measures 46.0 cm in length, 31.5 cm in width, and 12.2 cm in thickness. The book's wooden covers enclose eight tray-like cardboard pages edged with narrow wooden slats. These prevent the beads from being crushed when the book is closed. The cover is cased in green cloth, while the slats are covered with marbled blue and brown paper.

In the center of the front cover is a fancy paper label (Fig. 2) which reads:

FRATELLI GIACOMUZZI fu ANGELO, in VENEZIA, S. Marziale No. 3587. FABRICATORI e NEGOZIANTI di Conterie, Collane, Manufature a lume, Smalti metallici ed in colori, Marmi e Pietre artificiali ec. Compositori di Mosaici per uso sacro e profeno, sullo stile Greco, Romano e Fiorentino.

This announces that the Giacomuzzi Brothers, sons of the late Angelo Giacomuzzi, were fabricators and dealers of small glass beads, necklaces, lampworked beads, enamel in colors and metallic hues, artificial marble and stones, etc. They also produced mosaics in the Greek, Roman, and Florentine styles for both sacred and secular use.

The label also depicts several medals awarded to the company for its products: 1837 (for Belle Arti: fine arts), 1838 (for Conterie: small glass beads), 1838 (a gold medal for enamels), 1846 (for small glass beads), and 1852 (for mosaics).

The number “09.97.B.” in red paint appears at the top of the front cover. The top of the first page bears the legend FABBRICA PREMIATA DEI FRALLI. The top of the second page has a narrow strip of paper pasted over it but probably originally bore the name GIACOMUZZI. Thus the full heading would have read: “The award-winning factory of the Giacomuzzi Brothers.”

Each page of the book is divided into four pairs of vertical columns with black-ink lines. The right-hand column exhibits bead samples mounted on cotton string, while the one to the left provides the catalogue number (brown ink) and, for some beads, a numerical size code (red ink), and another number of unknown function (black ink). The latter is provided in brackets after the appropriate variety description in the inventory that follows.

The book originally contained 638 sequentially numbered samples (Pls. IV-VI), though only 359 remain today. All of these are of wound manufacture; that is, they were produced by winding different colored filaments of viscid glass about a rotating metal mandrel until the desired size and shape were achieved. While still in a plastic state on the mandrel, the bead could be manipulated into different forms by using paddles or tongs, or rolling or clamping the bead in different molds.

The Sample Book’s bead Inventory

1-13. W1Im and W1Ip; monochrome short square barrel beads and long square truncated convex bicone beads (Beck’s [1928] types IX.B.1.b. and IX.D.1.f., respectively). These square-sectioned beads generally taper toward either end from a slight central ridge, although the two smallest sizes are simply oblate beads that have been pressed while viscid to give them a squared outline. While two shapes are technically present, the catalogue reveals that the W1Im specimens are simply short versions of the W1Ip beads. There are five varieties of several sizes:

1-2. W1Im*; short square barrel; tsp. ruby; sizes 1-2 [110].

3-10. W1Ip*; long square truncated convex bicone; tsp. ruby; sizes 3-10 [nos. 3-6: 110].

11. W1Ip*; long square truncated convex bicone; tsp. teal green; size 4 [114].

BEAD FOLDER “E”

Measuring 39.5 cm in length, 28.0 cm in width, and 3.2 cm in thickness when closed, this folder consists of two tray-like cardboard pages connected by a cloth hinge. Unlike the sample book and Folder F, all four edges of each page are edged with narrow wooden slats. The folder’s covers, which consist of the backs of the cardboard pages, are encased in marbled yellow, green, blue, ruby, and black paper; the wooden slats are covered with textured, glossy, orange paper. The front cover has “09.97.E.” in red paint at the top and a blue “5” pencilled on a square white label in the center. The pages are sectioned into four pairs of columns with brown-ink lines. One column displays the beads while that to the left of it provides the catalogue number. Cartela 9 (card 9) is written at the top of the first page in black ink, as is the number “9” in blue pencil.

The beads, numbered sequentially from 181 to 360, are all of wound manufacture (Pl. VIII). All but 11 remain.

Folder “E” Bead Inventory

181-183, 189, 200-201. WIIIm and WIIIp; short square barrel beads and long square truncated convex bicone beads (Beck’s types IX.B.1.b. and IX.D.1.f., respectively) with monochrome bodies. These square-sectioned beads generally taper toward either end from a slight central ridge, although the two smallest sizes are simply oblate beads that have been pressed while viscid to give them a squared outline. While two shapes are technically present, the catalogue reveals that the WIIIm specimens are simply short versions of the WIIp beads. There are 6 varieties:

181. WIIIm*; short square barrel; op. black [size a].
182. WIIIm*; short square barrel; tsp. ruby [size a].

DISCUSSION

The Giacomuzzi sample book is clearly a product of the Giacomuzzi brothers, as revealed by its label. Although Folder F does not have a label, it has a very similar page layout and the flourishes at the top of certain numerals (i.e., 5 and 0) are common to both. It is, therefore, likely that Folder F is also from the Giacomuzzi company. Folder E has a different page layout (identical in some aspects to the Venetian Bead Book) and the handwritten numerals on its pages are of a different style from that on the Giacomuzzi book and the other folder. While the red serial numbers (09.97.B., 09.97.E., and 09.97.F.) painted on all three items suggest that they originally formed part of a set containing at least six components (09.97.A., C., and D. are missing), it is possible that the numbers are museum or archive accession numbers assigned to a collection of unrelated bead sample books and folders accumulated after the Giacomuzzis were no longer in business. Thus, it is presently impossible to state with any certainty whether Folder E is a product of the Giacomuzzi company or of a competing Venetian firm.

Regarding the age of the book and folders, the date of the most recent medal on the book’s label is 1852 which provides it a solid terminus post quem. As the Giacomuzzi brothers also received a silver medal in 1868 and a badge of honor the following year, it is probable that these awards would have been added to the company’s labels shortly thereafter (Francis 1988: 10). It is, therefore, postulated that the Giacomuzzi sample book was produced sometime between 1852 and 1869. Being of similar size, construction, and content, the two folders are believed to date to the same period.

Wound glass beads with applied flush decoration and undecorated glass beads of various forms dominate the Giacomuzzi sample book. Distinctive styles found in minor quantities include the copper-enamelled varieties, as well as those with zoned bodies, colored internal elements and raised designs, and those formed by spirally wrapping a glass rod into the form of a round or oval bead.

Folder E exhibits a similar frequency of styles, but lacks those with internal elements and spiral-wrapped bodies. Folder F is very similar in content to the book but lacks the spiral-wrapped beads. It is the only component of the Giacomuzzi collection which displays non-glass beads. It is not clear whether the latter—apparently made of a hard resin—were produced in Venice/Murano or imported from elsewhere.

The Giacomuzzi book and folders contain a wealth of information concerning wound bead sizes of the mid-19th century. They also reveal the complexity of the sizing systems in use. A comparison of the various dimensions reveals that just about every shape has a different set of size categories. Furthermore, in that the beads are handmade and thus not perfectly even throughout, there is considerable overlap in dimensions from one size group to the next. The fact that the difference from one size to the next is frequently only a millimeter or a fraction thereof further complicates matters. Nevertheless, if one keeps all this in mind, it is possible to postulate historical size groups for wound beads from 19th- and 20th-century contexts if the sample is large enough (at least 100 specimens of one variety, though the results become statistically more valid as the quantity increases). The data provided by the Giacomuzzi book and folders reveal that to accurately determine size categories, it is important to correlate bead length with bead diameter for each bead, something which Lester Ross (1976, 1990) has recommended for years. To keep measurement variations to a minimum, he also urged researchers to record a bead’s least diameter (Ross 1990:42).

Despite the missing beads, the Giacomuzzi bead book and associated Folder F vividly reveal the products of this famous glass- and beadmaking family. It is hoped that other identified mid-19th-century sample books and cards will eventually be found so that we may learn more about the products of the individual beadmaking companies that together made Venice and Murano famous throughout the world.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I would like to thank The Bead Museum in Glendale, Arizona, Gabrielle Liese, former museum director, and Charles and Gloria Arquette of Scottsdale, Arizona, for allowing me to study and photograph the Giacomuzzi collection and publish my findings. My thanks also go to the Material Culture Research Section of the Ontario Service Centre, Parks Canada, Ottawa, Ontario, for granting me leave to conduct my studies at The Bead Museum on two different occasions. Gratitude is expressed to Lucy Segatti of the Multilingual Translation Directorate, Department of the Secretary of State, Hull, Quebec, for providing a translation of the relevant sections of Morazzoni (1953). I am also indebted to the Portland Bead Society of Portland, Washington, for a generous grant to help produce and publish the color plates that illustrate this report.
