

MEET SHERRI HOLLAND

She's traded the sunshine of Virginia for the snowstorms of upstate New York, but Sherri Holland considers it a small price to pay for the chance to work with Syracuse University and its alumni.

As the new executive director of the Office of Alumni Relations, she brings an energetic vision to the job that presages good things for alumni.

"I want there to be more reasons why alumni like returning to Syracuse than just nostalgia," Holland says. "There are so many opportunities here for them."

Holland brings considerable experience from her post as director of alumni affairs at William and Mary College in Williamsburg, Virginia. While leading that program, she was responsible for such events as Homecoming and Reunion, all chapters and clubs, alumni publications, and special-interest activities. Under her leadership, the office won a prestigious national award for best alumni programming in the country from the Council for Advancement and Support of Education (CASE).

After growing up in Newport News, Virginia, Holland did undergraduate work first at Randolph-Macon Woman's College and then at William and Mary. Later she received a master's degree in public administration from Old Dominion University.

During her part-time graduate schooling she worked at a variety of jobs, including managing a children's retail clothing store. "My first son was very well dressed," she laughs. Ultimately she went to work for the parks and recreation division in Newport News, where she did hands-on special events programming. That experience led to a position in alumni affairs at William and Mary, where she worked her way up to heading the office.

"I always wanted to work for my alma mater and was very content there. But you get to a point where you're ready for the next set of opportunities," she explains. "Syracuse offered the chance to take what I'd done at William and Mary and expand it to an alumni population that's more than double in size."

Holland wants to tie alumni programming more closely to academics. "To me that's the ultimate mix of what alumni programming is all about," she says. "At William and Mary we instituted an academic festival on the Friday of Homecoming Weekend that allowed alumni to return to a variety of classrooms and listen to their favorite professors or learn about a new topic. It was immensely popular, and I'd like to see the same kind of program at Syracuse. It will remind alumni what a gem this University is. I'd like there to be an academic component to just about everything we do."

She is excited about the new Goldstein Alumni and Faculty Center. "Then when alumni return to Syracuse, they'll have a place to call home," she says.

Holland brought her two young sons, Marshall, 7, and Spencer, 2, to Syracuse just ahead of January's snowy one-two knock-out punch to the East Coast. But it didn't scare any of them. She says the children are adjusting well and so is she.

"One of the things that attracted me to Syracuse is that it has been ranked among the top 50 universities in the country," she says. "I'm very anxious to meet Syracuse's alumni. If they're anything like the gracious people who greeted me here, it's going to be great." ■

SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY ALUMNI CENTER

A MILESTONE FOR SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY

A center for Syracuse University alumni, faculty, and other members of the University community will become a reality in 1997! Located at 401 University Place (formerly the DKΣ House), the Goldstein Alumni and Faculty Center will encompass the existing Faculty Center in its design. It will also be the new home for the Alumni Relations Office. Design plans include a banquet hall, meeting rooms, and reception areas that will be available to alumni, faculty, staff, and students.

All alumni and friends of Syracuse University are invited to attend groundbreaking ceremonies for the new center on Saturday, June 1, at 11:45 a.m. The fourth annual Reunion Parade, starting at Slocum Hall, will open the festivities and lead reunion classes to the site.

We invite all alumni to this long-anticipated event. Whether you are returning to campus for your reunion or would just like to be a part of the festivities, please join us as we celebrate the addition of the center to our campus.

Call 1-800-SUALUMS (782-5867) with any questions or for details on how you can be part of this exciting project.

WANTED: ALUMNI MENTORS

Do you have time to write or talk to a Syracuse student who is interested in your field? If you do, the Center for Career Services wants to put you into the JAM: the Junior Alumni Mentor program.

JAM helps students in their junior year at SU explore career directions and opportunities, according to Chris Weiss, project coordinator. "First we match alumni and students according to their professional interests," he says. "We look for mentors who live in the student's hometown or in the Syracuse area."

Mentors and students can have conversations face to face, during school or during vacations, over the phone, or by e-mail.

"We hope the mentors talk with students about how they got their current positions, what their daily work patterns are like, and the job market in their field or organization," Weiss says. "We certainly don't expect them to provide jobs, merely to give students guidelines for the job search."

The program targets juniors so they can begin networking early with professionals in their fields. Weiss hopes the students will retain the connections through their senior year.

Interested alumni should contact Chris Weiss, Center for Career Services, 235 Schine Student Center, Syracuse, New York 13244-2070, telephone 315-443-3616.

ORANGE GROVE

Washington, D.C.

Washington, D.C., is home to one of the most active alumni clubs in the country. According to club president Dina Green '87, club members participate in a wide variety of events.

"We have a diversified membership," Green says. "Some of our people are great sports fans so we program a number of events revolving around Syracuse games, those played in the area and ones broadcast on television."

Members with other interests also find their needs met. "We plan many arts activities, like attending the theater and visiting museums," Green says.

attracts a large crowd, as does our spring barbecue. This year some 170 people showed up for the holiday party. We were thrilled."

The Washington club was formed in 1967. Green says Greenberg House helps focus the club's activities, providing an attractive place to meet that's convenient to Washington's metro train system.

Coach Roy Simmons Jr. spoke at the annual luncheon in Cleveland and later chatted with alumni Erin Kenneally '93 (left) and Sean Reali '96.

Ohio-Northeast (Cleveland)

With lacrosse coach Roy Simmons Jr. as star attraction, the annual winter luncheon of the northeast Ohio club proved a major success.

"We had one of our largest turnouts ever," says Brad Glazer '76, club president. "Coach gave a very interesting talk covering a wide range of subjects, from sports to his interest in art to the University in general. We doubly appreciated his visit, since he had trouble both getting to Cleveland and leaving because of the early January blizzard on the East Coast."

"Then we plan events that everyone seems to enjoy. People find our wine-tasting evening fun. We always get a big turnout for our periodic happy hours, where members get together to network and chat. Our annual December holiday party at Greenberg House

Glazer says the club always holds its winter luncheon when current students are home on Christmas break. "We invite students and their parents to join our members at the event, and we pick up expenses for the students' lunches," he says. "It's always a popular event."

According to Glazer, the alumni club has existed for more than 30 years, although levels of activity have varied during that time. Glazer became involved after attending a luncheon at which Chancellor Kenneth A. Shaw spoke, and he became president in 1993, when a formalized board of directors was elected.

"We plan programs that appeal to our entire membership of more than 60 alumni," Glazer says. "We hold four events each year, one per quarter. Besides our annual luncheon, we attend a baseball game, go to a football game in Pittsburgh, and invite speakers. Last year, the Office of Alumni Relations named our program with Professor Maria Russell speaking on the terrorist bombing of Pan Am 103 the Outstanding Alumni Club Program of the year."

Glazer describes the club's goals as particularly beneficial to members. "We want to provide opportunities for business networking, making new friendships, and keeping in contact with the University and promoting it in our area."

Baltimore

The Baltimore alumni club went all out to mark the University's 125th year, honoring Court of Appeals Justice Irma Steinberg Raker '59 as Alumnus of the Century.

"Judge Raker is an outstanding woman," says the club's immediate past president, David Slotnick. "She is one of only two women to be appointed from Maryland to the Court of Appeals."

Kathleen Kennedy Townsend both attended to honor this prominent SU alumna.

The Baltimore club is relatively new, having been established in 1988 and currently having 80 members. Slotnick was president for the past three years.

"We try to schedule three or four meetings for the entire membership," he says. In the past year the group has attended SU vs. Georgetown basketball games, gone to local minor league baseball games, welcomed guest speakers from the University, and sponsored an annual New Student Send-Off.

"Our schedule has been very successful," Slotnick says, "and we know more people will attend events when they realize how much we have to offer." ■

ON-LINE
ALUMNI CLUB

We're on-line! We're delighted to tell you the SU On-Line Alumni Club went public last August and already boasts 168 members—and that's without widely advertising it!

The club is actually a listserv, a discussion list that allows members to send messages that are received by all the list's subscribers. Only people who subscribe to the list can send messages or review the names of other members. We verify that all subscribers are alumni.

The listserv connects members electronically with each other and the University and allows them to discuss their concerns about SU. Please become part of our group.

If you are interested, send us an e-mail at sualumni@suadmin.syr.edu telling us to sign you up. Shortly thereafter, you will be able to begin participating in on-line discussions on such issues as the mascot, our hottest discussion topic yet.

Also check out the Office of Alumni Relations home page on the World Wide Web (WWW). To find it, point your Web browser to http://sumweb.syr.edu/sumon/alum\_rel/public/web/index.htm. You'll learn how to become part of an alumni e-mail address directory; get information on alumni club events, alumni tours, Reunion, Homecoming, and other programs; link to the Center for Career Services home page; and get a form to change your biographical information for our database. ## THE WAY IT WAS Winnie Pollock Bengelsdorf '49 (left, in both pictures) and Ellen Rochlin Godwin '49 became roommates and friends from the first day they arrived at SU. Fifty years later, the friendship endures.

SURPRISING SIMILARITIES

by Winnie Pollock Bengelsdorf '49, Bethesda, Maryland

Retired Chief, Personnel Policy, Nuclear Regulatory Commission; Free-lance Writer, The Washington Post

It was June 25, 1945. I was a slightly anxious (correction: totally terrified) incoming freshman. A stranger, Ellen, was my assigned roommate.

Last year Ellen Rochlin Godwin and I celebrated the 50th anniversary of an enduring friendship that started that day. How did we note the occasion? We went back to school on an Elderhostel, together again in a dormitory room, with the bathroom down the hall. Frankly, it was an improvement over SU's Waverly Cottage (a private home converted to college residence), where other students walked through our room to get to the bathroom.

During Elderhostel we found similarities in renewed campus life: hiking to the dining hall, dashing between buildings, enjoying sleepy late-night talks, learning new things, going places together, and meeting people from different places and backgrounds. What a wonderful way to commemorate college comradeship!

The anniversary prompted looking back to Syracuse days. At our arrival during World War II, veterans already abounded. Then in August we celebrated victory, chain-dancing through downtown streets. Now even the Cold War is over. Our class, present at the dawn of the nuclear age, currently witnesses the dismantling of these weapons. It is tempting to focus on the myriad changes over time: incredible technological and social upheavals, campus building booms, increased college costs, and student diversity.

Surprise! The way it was, in some ways, is the way it remains. As I remember varsity debating (my favorite extracurricular activity), I am struck by the continued controversy on the national forensic issues we debated then. Consider the 1947 topic: "Resolved: That the federal government should provide a system of complete medical care available to all citizens at public expense."

We also debated federal aid to state-supported schools to equalize educational opportunity, appropriate use of tax funds, and financing pensions. I'm confident Syracuse continues to provide an academic atmosphere in which people can seek solutions to intractable public policy problems. Debating also taught me an invaluable lifelong skill: how to argue both sides of an issue equally convincingly.

Let the record show, I married my debate partner, Harold. Ellen also married a Syracusan and for decades both our families lived in different suburban areas of Washington, D.C., and both had tours overseas.

For me, nostalgia is noting the nexus between past and present and attributing appropriate meaning to these connections. My conclusion? Syracuse was pivotal in preparing me well for my future. Thanks, Syracuse, for my excellent education, college experiences, and for assigning Ellen as my first roommate.
