Facing page: Gloria Steinem, feminist, journalist, political activist and founder of Ms. Magazine, presented “An Evening with Gloria Steinem.” Steinem spoke of her career in journalism, including her undercover assignment as a Playboy bunny; her experiences as an editor for New York magazine; the founding of Ms., the nation’s first feminist magazine; and her involvement in the women’s rights movement. The event was sponsored by the Syracuse University chapter of Women in Communications and Ed2010, the University’s magazine networking club.

Below, left: Setnor Auditorium in Crouse College was the venue for the workshop “The Negro Spiritual in the History of American Music.” Presented by Mary Virginia Willie Gauthier and Harlan London, the workshop explored the history and interpretation of spirituals and gave participants the opportunity to practice singing them.

Below, top right: The famed New York City jazz club Birdland was the venue for the Tepper Center Cabaret, a musical theater extravaganza featuring the talents of College of Visual and Performing Arts alumni. The evening celebrated the success of the Tepper Center and its Tepper Semester program, which is named for and supported by Broadway producer Arielle Tepper Madover '94, an SU alumna and member of the University’s Board of Trustees.

Below, bottom right: The world glowed a little more orange on “National Orange Day,” marking the 137th anniversary of the founding of Syracuse University on March 24. At a celebration held March 23, the festivities included birthday cake, an appearance by Otto the Orange and music and entertainment by Z89. Community service is a National Orange Day tradition, both locally and across the nation. SU students, faculty and staff, along with alumni club members around the country, celebrated the day by volunteering in their communities.
