The Couple Moving Out

Robert Lietz

Follow this and additional works at: https://surface.syr.edu/suscholar

Part of the Poetry Commons

Recommended Citation

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by SURFACE. It has been accepted for inclusion in Syracuse Scholar (1979-1991) by an authorized editor of SURFACE. For more information, please contact surface@syr.edu.
Robert Lietz is a graduate of LeMoyne College and received a master's degree in creative writing from Syracuse in 1976. His poems have appeared in numerous journals including Shenandoah and Poetry Northwest. Running in Place, Robert Lietz's first book-length collection, appeared in 1979; his second, At Park and East Division, is scheduled for publication by L'Epervier Press in 1980. Currently Mr. Lietz is teaching English at Syracuse University and Onondaga Community College.

The wax drips audibly.
The fruit shifts of its accord.
How the strict lines of our closed rooms first gave way neither of us can tell you.

Only something in the floorboards completes its private turn to stone. You listen to its plunder, its fall, the atoms packed on one another with their busy claims.

—We fit ourselves to habitation, in reversal, in opposition to one priest's say, are this fiddletune, pas de deux, eight years sweeping and seeing clean, are this bearing shared together, its scale and expanse—

We have taken our hush and our high-tide, our street's sparse foliage lit by the lamp and quarter-moon, in one brimful instant, our branches and our windows intimately flagged.

— If only the powder keeps!
If only the tall moon or that beyond the tall moon stands!

We are confirmed beyond our ken. The light doubles on that wood and on the clouds behind.

—Robert Lietz